Peter Apfelbaum, tenor & soprano saxophones

Alex Brown, piano

Johannes Weidenmueller, bass

Dafnis Prieto, drums

Since his arrival in New York in 1999, two-time Grammy nominee and 2011 MacArthur Fellow Dafnis Prieto has steadily grown in stature as an instrumentalist and composer, both as a coveted sideman and as bandleader of a variety of ensembles, ranging from trio to his new Big Band. The core of most of his bands has been his Sí o Sí (“Yes or Yes”) Quartet. The quartet’s 2018 edition comprises Prieto’s longtime collaborator Peter Apfelbaum on saxophones, Alex Brown on piano, and Johannes Weidenmueller on bass, all among the most in-demand players in New York’s vibrant jazz and Latin jazz scenes. Since its inception, the Sí o Sí Quartet has become a thrillingly multifaceted ensemble, with an orchestral richness to match its rhythmic complexity and breathtaking energy.

Tapping its profound fluency in folkloric Cuban idioms and taking daring plunges into modern jazz harmonies and improvisation, the Sí o Sí Quartet entralls audiences hungry for music at once familiar and new. A four star Downbeat review of the band’s debut CD, Live at Jazz Standard NYC on Prieto’s own label Dafnison Music, described the magic of the quartet’s appeal: “Prieto has made some exciting albums previously, but those who catch him on a regular basis know that the bandstand is where the real action is,” while Drumhead Magazine wrote: “Dafnis Prieto is a revolutionary drummer as well as visionary composer and bandleader. His Si o Si Quartet possesses an ability to musically communicate that almost borders on telepathy.”

In his review of a Sí o Sí Quartet performance for the New York Times, Nate Chinen praised Prieto as “a spectacularly proficient Cuban drummer” and hailed his music as “dynamic to the extreme ... a slippery amalgam of complex polyrhythm and incantatory melody.” By adding the quartet in 2009 to a roll call of bands that includes the Proverb Trio, the Absolute Quintet, the Dafnis Prieto Sextet, and the brand new Big Band, the native of Santa Clara, Cuba, clinched his reputation as one of the premier bandleaders and composers in jazz today. Down Beat Magazine praised him as “a composer of considerable depth,” and All About Jazz called his music “ecstatic and intelligent.”
